ZEBRA MUSSELS HIDE HERE.

CLEAN, DRAIN, DRY YOUR BOAT.

Clean Your Boat. Save Your Lake. Zebra mussels are small invasive species that can spread from lake to lake by hitching a ride on your boat and trailer. One female can have up to a million microscopic larvae. They mature quickly, attach to hard surfaces and can damage your boat and engine. They hurt aquatic life, ruin ecosystems and fisheries – even affect your water supply. You can keep that from happening by cleaning your boat, motor, trailer and gear of all debris and draining it of all water. Then dry it for at least a week or wash it all with hot, soapy water before boating in another waterbody. Learn more at www.texasinvasives.org.

HELLO ZEBRA MUSSELS.
GOODBYE TEXAS LAKES.

Capture the Power of Your Dreams

Authentic Native American-style dreamcatcher plate with real leather, feathers and beads

Measures an impressive 13½ inches in height

"Moonlight Vision" Dreamcatcher Plate

- Authentically hand-crafted and hand-painted
- Showcases the visionary artistry of Andrew Farley in a riveting art montage
- Arrayed in faux turquoise stones, a miniature dreamcatcher, pawprint emblem, laced frame, arrowheads and more

Meticulous hand-painting and attention to detail capture the look of authentic Native American handicrafts.

Shown much smaller than actual sizes: plate, about 6½ in. diam.; frame, about 8 in. wide; overall height about 13½.
